An Old Story.

News and Courier.

Someone has recovered from the journal of Governor Winthrop the following extract, written in November, 1633, and relating an experience of the Massachusetts Colony:

"The scarcity of workmen had caused them to raise their wages to an excessive rate so as a carpenter would have three shillings a day, a laborer two shillings and sixpence, &c., and accordingly those who had commodities to sell advanced their prices sometimes double to that they cost in England, so as it grew to a general complaint, which the court, taking knowledge of as also of some further evils which were springing out of the excessive rates of wages, they made an order that carpenters, masons, &c. should take but two shillings a day and laborers but eighteen pence and that no commodity should be sold at above fourpence in the shilling more than it cost for ready money in England. The evils which were springing were: 1. Many spent much time idly, because they could get as much for four days as would keep them a week. 2. They spent much in tobacco and strong waters, which was a great waste to the Commonwealth, which by reason of so many scarce commodities expended could not have subsisted at this time, but that it was supplied by the cattle and corn which were sold to newcomers at very dear rates."

The New York Sun heads this: "As probably all the commentary that is necessary or profitable."

"Ambitious" Candidates.

Waterboro Press and Standard.

In the old Roman days, a Roman citizen who wanted to be elected to an office went and stood on a pedestal in the Forum and displayed to the voters the scars of the wounds he had received in the war. The candidate who could show the biggest scars and the largest number, especially if they were fresh, stood the best show to receive the largest number of votes.

In our time when a citizen wants to be elected to an office he glories in the record of his achievements, and the least service he has rendered seems to swell into great magnitude as he tells of his prowess in this and that effort to serve the "dear" people.

Even sometimes men who have never been known to do any public service aspire to public office on the strength of what they might be able to do when elected, ignoring the fact that no man can be so easily "made over."

If a citizen has in his private life held aloof from all public service and has served only self, then it is a good policy to permit him to continue in a private capacity, for the chances are that he will forget his promises soon after he has been elected.

We sometimes see a man whom the desire for office makes over. He is pleasant and agreeable and wishes to do all that he can for everyone. He smiles and shakes hands, endorses notes, and renders service. Aspiring, he is agreeable. Pity is that soon after the election he lapses back into the same self centered individual as before and the community hears little or nothing from him till he gets ready for another campaign.

Have you ever noticed that the office seeker ere election day, grasp everybody's hand and something kind and fetching say.

But when safe in office with a salary big and fat, forgets the humble voter. Have you ever noticed that?

The Roman ambition still prevails largely.

Home Town Helps

HOMES MAKE GOOD CITIZENS

To Own One's Own Home Means Acquisition of a Certain Standing in the Community.

"He's a home owner and a taxpayer," is the best recommendation any man can have in his own community. It gives him a standing forthwith, not so much as a person of some financial importance, but as a dependable, substantial and self-respecting citizen, wisely regardful of his own and his family's happiness and best interests, and at the same time an asset to the neighborhood in which he lives. So universal is the home-loving instinct that it might almost be said there is something wrong morally with the man or woman who does not care to own a home; and that is why the malcontents, the habitual industrial disturbers and the socially restive that afflict themselves on all countries are of the element that is very largely without home ties.

Unless all signs fail, this is to be the great American home-building year. Stimulated by the government's urgent advice to "own a home for your children's sake," and by the injunction that during the war it was patriotic not to build, now we can best show our patriotism by building, there has been a tremendous revival in the sentiment for home ownership. The indications are that the unhappy classes of renters and boarders will be greatly depleted before the end of 1919, and that there will be many thousands of additional families entered upon the life of happiness and contentment to be found only in the home.

The price of building materials today is not high, as compared with prices of other commodities, and the community that does not add materially to its total of homes this year is likely to be rated as lacking in patriotism as well as good business judgment.

GOOD USE FOR OLD WELL

Water in It Employed to Cool That in Use in the Public Drinking Fountain.

In many cities which have acquired water systems, there are old wells which have been abandoned and closed. The illustration shows how one of these was used in a Western city to cool the water used in a public drinking fountain. The supply pipe for the fountain, instead of running directly from the water main to the base of the fountain, led first to the coil pipe which was placed below the water line in the old well. As the drinking water flowed through the turns of this coil, some of its heat was radiated to the cold water in the well, and, on emerging at the upper end of the coil into the pipe leading to the fountain, it was several degrees cooler than when leaving the water main. The device is especially effective on fountains of the type which are not running continuously, but are turned on by pressing a lever.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A GOOD FRIEND.

A good friend stands by you when in need. Dillon people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. W. A. Weaver, shoemaker of Main St., Dillon, endorsed Doan's four years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony?

"I had pains in my back and was sore and lame in the morning," says Mr. Weaver. "My sight became blurred and the secretions from my kidneys acted irregularly. I had other symptoms of kidney trouble. Friends recommended Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a supply at the McLaurin Drug Co., and they soon relieved me of my trouble and fixed me up in fine shape."

The above statement given December 22, 1914, and on January 29, 1918, Mr. Weaver said: "I have never heard of a kidney medicine that can equal Doan's Kidney Pills. They have completely cured me of every symptom of kidney trouble and I am only too glad to recommend them again."
